TPC Hosts Golf Writers

On November 3rd and 4th, The Plantation Course will host a group of Golf and Tourism Writers as part of their tour of Western S.C. and the Low Country. The tour is sponsored by SC Low Country Tourism and coordinated by Crossroads Marketing of Atlanta, Ga. The group of 11 will be our guest for dinner at The Plantation Grill, will stay in the Plantation Villas and will play the Plantation Course on Thursday morning. Hopefully, Edisto will be one of the highlights of their 5 day trip.

Special Tourney Planned

Kloverfest

On Friday November 12th, TPC will host a One Day Tourney to assist a worthy cause of local interest. Mr. Brad Cargile, Assistant Manager of our Piggly Wiggly, lost his brother 2 years ago. He was survived by one young daughter. Brad has taken responsibility to establish an educational trust for his niece, and all proceeds from the days activities will be used to help fund this need. Everyone is invited to play in this Captain's Choice fun event with an entry fee of $300 per team. Food, beverages, gifts, and raffles will round out a full day of fun for this great cause.

Congratulations to Member Denny Jerwers for his Hole-In-One on # 3 !!!!!

The shot was made from 142 yards with his 8 iron on October 27th during the Wednesday Afternoon Scramble and witnessed by Jeff and Katie Wilson of Lincoln, Nebraska.

This was Denny's 2nd Hole-in-One on our course !!

Golf Chuckles

An 80-year-old man moved to a new city and joined the local country club. Right away, a lot of the members thought: an old man we can win some money from! "I hit the ball pretty good," he said, "but I have a lot of trouble getting out of deep bunkers."

"Aha!" they thought. "Our course doesn't have many deep bunkers, but a lot of shallow ones and if he struggles getting out of the sand, we'll take his money for sure." When he showed up for his first round, Harvey was waiting. "Would you like to play?" Harvey asked. "What do you say, put a little money on it?" The man agreed and they set out to play. "How many strokes do you need?" asked Harvey, who was only 55. "Oh, I don't need any strokes," the old man said, "my game is really good. The only problem I'm having right now is getting out of deep bunkers."

Harvey was a good player, but the old man was really good. If not for Harvey's 25-year age advantage, the old man would have been far ahead. He even hit the ball great on a couple bunker shots. "Hmmm," Harvey thought, "he said he had trouble with deep bunkers, and we haven't really got to one of those yet ... I know he'll find one around the 17th green."

Sure enough, they reached 17th, tied, and the old man promptly put his tee ball in the middle of a big, deep bunker. "I've got him now!" Harvey thought. The 80-year-old slid down into the bunker and took his stance over the ball. He took a perfect swing and the ball hit perfectly on the fringe, took one little hop and rolled within two feet of the cup. Harvey had seen enough. "Dang it!" he shouted at the man, who was still in the bunker. "I thought you said you had a lot of trouble getting out of deep bunkers!" "Oh, I do," the old man said, reaching out to Harvey. "Can you give me a hand?"
